

Individuals who own Sinclair Broadcast group can vote their mind. But they do not have the right to use the public airwaves for the sort of smear campaign dressed as "news" that "stolen honor" represents. It's a strange world: Howard Stern can't say sh on the radio, but these people think they can smear it all over a presidential candidate who they don't like.

Put another way: Michael Moore made a movie that people went out, paid for and saw. He would not be able to simply foist it on the airwaves even if he owned stations because people would cry foul for the lack of "balance" and "fairness." in the movie. Same situation here. Don't let Sinclair do this to our already weak and cheapened democracy.
